

TRAIN ILL, BUT IS IT SMALLPOX?

Health Commissioner Lederle Sends a Staff Physician to Stamford to Make an Official Report on the Case.

HE WANTS TO MAKE SURE.

No Case of Small-Pox Has Been Reported in Two Months—If Citizen Train Has It There'll Be Wholesale Vaccination at Mills Hotel.

One of Health Commissioner Lederle's staff physicians went to Stamford, Conn., to-day to make sure of the diagnosis of small-pox in the case of George Francis Train, who left the Mills Hotel in Bleeker street on Wednesday to visit his daughter, Mrs. Susan M. Gulager, of that place.

The New York authorities were notified of the nature of Mr. Train's illness, but when Dr. Blauvelt went to the Mills Hotel to fumigate he said that Mr. Train's symptoms, as told by Manager Thomas, did not point absolutely to small-pox. If the diagnosis is correct every one of the 1,500 patrons of the Mills Hotel will have to submit to vaccination and the entire building will be fumigated.

Twenty of the attendants who came in contact with Mr. Train within the last two weeks have already been vaccinated and parts of the hotel fumigated.

As there has not been a case of small-pox in New York City for two months, Dr. Lederle thinks Citizen Train contracted the disease while visiting his daughter several weeks ago. The disease has been prevalent around Bridgeport, Stamford and other near-by Connecticut towns. Three weeks ago Mr. Train visited his daughter to be present at an amateur theatrical performance given by his grandsons. He had a great frolic with the little ones and then returned to New York.

A few days later, according to Manager Thomas, he complained of feeling tired. "Guess it's spring fever," he said. Manager Thomas noticed he was eating less than his usual frugal allowance and wrote to Mrs. Gulager. She came down to take her father up to Stamford, but he refused to go. She kept writing and telegraphing him and Mr. Thomas continually importuned him to go to the country.

No letters came Wednesday, and Mr. Thomas held his peace. As a result, Mr. Train said to him: "As long as you people are not bothering me about it, I guess I'll go to Stamford. He was quite ill when he took the train, and had to go to bed when he reached his daughter's home. Dr. S. B. Schick and Schavoor were called in, and after watching him for a day, decided he had small-pox. He will not be moved to an isolation hospital as the Gulager residence is remote from the village and is strictly quarantined.

Though seventy-four years of age, Citizen Train enjoys rather good health. He has lived at the Mills Hotel since it was completed, paying $2.10 a week for his room and an average of 20 cents a day for his two meals, one of which he takes at 10 o'clock A. M., and the other at 3 o'clock P. M. He is a strict vegetarian. His income is derived from royalties on his novels and occasional writings for the newspapers. His last work, "My Life in Many Lands," has just been issued by the Appletons.

THINK STEAMER LOST IN SEA COLLISION.

Owners of the S. V. Luckenbach Convinced She Went Down After Striking a Schooner.

The officers of the Luckenbach Towing Company now believe that Capt. George T. Thompson and his crew of twenty-one men on the oil tank steamer S. V. Luckenbach lost their lives as the result of a collision at sea. The ship left Sabine Pass, Tex., March 22, with more than a million gallons of oil for Marcus Hook, Pa.

The captain of the British bark Skoda has reported that on April 23, while 250 miles east of Cape Charles, he sailed through miles of oil-covered water. The Luckenbachs decided at once that the skid was from their vessel. They think it likely that the Luckenbach was in collision with the four-masted schooner George C. Thomas, which sailed from Constable Island, West Indies, on Feb. 5, bound for New York, and is now two months overdue. She would have been in the track of the Luckenbach. "It is not improbable," said a member of the towing firm, that they came together and were both lost.

The S. V. Luckenbach was valued at $200,000 and her cargo of Texas oil at $40,000.

"AVERAGE BRESCHI," ITALIAN SHOUTED.

Anarchist with Bundle of Incendiary Circulars Arrested for Speech in Mulberry Bend.

Policeman Miller, of the Elizabeth street station, arraigned before Magistrate Du-day a young Italian who was arrested last night in Mulberry Bend Park haranguing a gang of Italians to remember that to-day was the anniversary of King Humbert's assassination.

"Average Breschi," the Italian was shouting to his countrymen. "Anarchy is right. It's the only true doctrine." The Italian ran when he saw Miller approaching. Miller chased him and caught him on the roof of No. 33 Baxter street. He threw a bundle at Miller which the latter caught. It was a bundle of circulars telling all about the assassination of King Humbert and the arrest of Breschi.

In court the Italian said he was Tony Foggi, of No. 19 Baxter street. "I am a believer in republics," he told Magistrate Du-day. Foggi was committed to the Tombs in default of $500 bail for examination to-morrow. Magistrate Du-day has asked District-Attorney Jerome to give the matter his attention in connection with the publication of the circular.

Clothes in the Making.

Our "Concave" Shoulder.

A deal of knowledge—the knowledge of making men's clothes as well as other things—comes from experience, and we have had years of experience in the making of men's clothes. Skill and brain are other factors which enter into the art of making correct men's clothing, and which are not lacking in this organization. These forces combined have succeeded in making the greatest improvement in men's clothes in over fifty years—

Our "Concave" Shoulder and "Closefitting" Collar.

These two important features, we have put into all of
